

Introducing.... Where there's smoke, Part 1

A Latter-day Expose of the Magic of Steam Locos In Regular Service

Long ago the mighty Iron Horse ruled the rails. From the Flèche d'Or hauled by magnificent French Pacifics and English Merchant Navy class at 100 mph to the incredible hills of Portugal and far Eastern Europe, a few brave souls risked much to capture steam action in living colour back in the 1960s and 1970s.

A little later more of us headed south, covering railway operations in Africa where Garratts abounded and the mountains provided some of the best backdrops in the world.

Where there's smoke captures the very best of the collections of some of the most travelled railway photographers of our times. Part 1 takes us from the UK to Capetown, featuring spectacular shots in France, Spain and many other mainstream Western countries, veering into less accessible parts of the Eastern Bloc where few enthusiasts trod, and then on to the Middle East including Syria and Jordan, plus of course Central and then Southern Africa, where steam lasted in numbers until the early 1990s.

Some Highlights Of The Book:

- 100% full colour
- Stunningly reproduced images including 14 European, 4 Middle Eastern and 8 African countries
- Contributors include John Whitely, Robert Kingsford-Smith, Charlie Lewis, Mike Tyack & others
